Where Shall Guiteau be Tried? What the Lawyers Say.

There has been so much speculation as to the legal technicalities in relation to the trial of Guiteau that our reporter went around about the City Hall and its vicinity to-day to get at the real sentiment of the legal fraternity. Lawyer Warren C. Stone said that he had not examined into the matter but he was strongly of the opinion that Guiteau could be tried and convicted here, provided a competent jury could be obtained.

Lawyer A. A. Birney said that Guiteau could be tried here under the law laid down in Bishop's criminal law, section 268, of the first volume.

Lawyer Sweat said that under section 731 of the Revised Statutes the prisoner Guiteau could be either tried here or in Guitean.

There is very little excitement at the jail this morning. When a CRITIC reporter called there at 12 m. he found all quiet and serene. The sentries on the outside were quietly pacing to and fro, while the soldiers quietly pacing to and fro, while the soldiers and turnkeys within were sitting around, apparently not at all apprehensive that anything unusual was probable, or, indeed, even possible. Guiteau spent another good night last night, and arose at an early hour and asked for his breakfast, which he ravenously devoured in a short time. A guard stated to Thie Critric that the assessin amounts better estimated and thereto. guard stated to THE CRITIC that the as-sassin appears better satisfied now thar at any time since his confinement. "Indeed," said the guard, "he appears to me like a man who realizes that the ambition of his life has been accomplished." At times, however, the cowardly brute inquires if there is any danger of an attack being made upon the jail.

Shark Caught in the Potomac.

A shark measuring nine feet three inche and weighing 280 pounds was captured at St. George's Island on the 14th instant by Mr. Robert J. Adams, one of the proprietors of the popular Potomac Hotel at that place. It was caught during the night by a hook that had been set for it, and when found in the morning was dead. One of its smallest teeth was sent by Mr. Adams to Mr. A. J. Donaldson of this city. It was over an inch in length and about three fourths of an inch in width at its broadest part and tapers down to a point at the end. The tapering sides are very sharp and jagged, presenting the appearance of very fine saw teeth. There are other sharks in the same location and efforts are being made to capture them, as they are extremely troublesome to men and most shocking to bathers. me to fisher-

A TERRIBLE CRASH. Fall of Barbour & Hamilton's New

Building, At ten minutes to 1 o'clock this afternoon

tremendous report, similar to that produced by an explosion, attracted crowds of people to the vicinity of Sixth street and Pennsylvania Avenue. The streets for a fow minutes were enveloped in smoke, and fire-alarm was turned in immediately. A Carrie reporter arrived on the scene ninute later; found the rear of Barbour & Hamilton's imposing new warehouse in ruins, and the adjoining horse-shoeing establishment on B street almost completely demolished. The cause was the giving way of the third floor of the grocery warehouse, carrying hundreds of barrels of flour, the roof, the walls and two floors to the ground. Particulars of the Crash.

A few moments after the building fell the Fire Department arrived on the scene, and all the available police were ordered to the spot.

The details of the accident, as gathered from the best authority, seem to be that about twenty men, including Messrs. Barbour & Hamilton, were in the front part of

by an avalanche of bricks, bags, boxes and barrels which came down. The greatest concern was felt for the six men buried, un-til three made their appearance in the front of the building, creeping out from under the

of the building, creeping out from under the heavy timbers.
Glasby, the engineer, made known his whereabouts by calling for help, and was released from the weight of debris that rested upon him. He was badly, but not fatally, scalded, and was the only man seriously injured, as both Creasby and Walter crept out a little later, bearing no marks, except bruises and slight scratches on their arms.

The adjoining blacksmith shop, which was badly damaged, was that of John Roche, No. 613 B street, in the second story of The trio saved themselves by jumping from the windows to the ground. The floor, which gave way, was covered with 5,000 barrels of flour, and the second floor, which it broke through, con-tained boxes of nearly every class of bour & Hamilton's which is destroyed cost alone $18,000.

The damage to the building and stock is estimated at $25,000. The portion of Bar-bour & Hamilton's which is destroyed ost alone $18,000.

Barbour & Hamilton have been singularly unfortunate with their storage. When they were in their former building on Louisiana avenue they met with a similar loss in precisely the same way. The present building was occupied September 1, only a few days ago, and now there is a speedy recurrence of the disaster.

The financial trouble in a case of this kind is that no insurance can be collected. There is no offset of this sort to the losa. Competent authorities agree that the building was overloaded and not able to stand anything like the strain imposed on it. Reckoning the flour at 196 pounds to the barrel, there was a pressure of 882,000 pounds on the third floor, a matter of 441 tons. It is not surprising that the structure gave way under such a strain. It is rather remarkable that it has stood it so long.

James A. Bingham, a one-armed white man, was standing on the third floor of Barbour & Hamilton's warehouse when it fell, and was hurled to the ground floor. His only injury was spraining his back while creeping out from under the debris.

The Figure 9 and Gen. Garfield.

The figure 9 seems to have been closely interwoven in Gen. Garfield's life. He was interwoven in Gen. Garfield's life. He was born and died on the 19th day of the month. He was in the 49th year of his age. Fought the battle of Chickamauga on the 19th. Was 29 when he entered the army. Died on the 79th day of his siokness. Elected State senator in 1859, and United States Senator in 1859. Received on the thirty-sixth ballot 399 ballots, which secured his nomination to the Presidency. Died in the year 1881, which is a multiple of the figure 9, and which makes 9 if its figures are added together in pairs.

"The early morning of yesterday found the people of Mentor in a dazed condition in regard to the President's death. The fathe people of Mentor in a dazed condition in regard to the President's death. The facilities for receiving messages have been much curtailed since last summer, when a private wire ran into Gen. Garfield's office. Therefore, the information Monday night assumed the shape of the rumors of the President's death, with nothing to confirm. Similar rumors on the afternoon of the shooting, and again a month ago, had been found untrue. The report at this time made a serious impression, and the people went to bed with a grave dread of what might occur during the night, but did not realize that the fatal moment had arrived. Your correspondent reached Gen. Garfield's residence about 9 o'clock yesterday morning. His knock at the door was promptly answered by Mr. Rudolph, father of Mrs. Garfield, a gentleman of over 80 years of age, though his iron-gray hair and beard would give the impression that he is not over 60 years old. He had one of the Cleveland morning newspapers in his hand. He said both he and all his neighbors had refused to believe that the President was dead, till they actually saw the printed account. "But it is all over now." he said, in a firm tone, "and the account is made up so far as he is concerned. I said at the time of the shooting that it was for some wise purpose."

The Rev. W. B. Hendryx, pastor of the Disciple Church at Montor, said that in the midst of the campaign a year ago Gon. Garfield's family received intimations from Chicago of his being in danger. Being remonstrated with for not being more cantious, Garfield replied to Hendryx. "I did not seek nomination, and the Lord will protect me if it is His will." Hendryx then said that one very dark night during protect me if it is His will." Hendryx then said that one very dark night during the campaign, after the family had retired, a knock was heard, and Garfield went to the door. A man there said another man in a buggy outside, fully six rods away, in darkness, wanted him to come out to see him. Gen. Garfield said: "He is welcome in, but I cannot go out there." This ended the interview. When Guiteau's portrait reached Mentor after the shooting, recognized it as a Gien. Arthur is the first President who entered upon the duties of the office elsewhere than at the seat of Government, but there was a Vice-President who took the oath of office in a foreign land. Hon. Gen. Garfield's Violent Beath Fore-able prediction by the Baltimore astrologist, Ruthiel, and which was published in the Sunday Capital, of this city, on the 20th of last March. This gentleman is the same who prophesied the assassination of the Czar of Russia nearly ten days before its occurrence. The document is a curiosity of literature and evidences that there really are more things in Heaven and earth than are generally accepted in our philosophy:

Gen. Garfield's Horoscope Gen. Garfield, according to the very best authority, was born November 19, 1831, at 2 o'clock in the morning. The planet Saturn had risen shortly before in the sign Virgo, and Mars was not far below the horizon in Libra. Mercury and the sun each cast a sextile aspect to the ascending degree and the moon a trine. He has, therefore, some portion of the qualities of each of these planets in his physical and mental organization.

Ptolemy tells us that the intellectual abilities are never first-class unless Mercury and the moon have aspect with one another or with the ascendant. In this case they are configurated together, and also with the ascendant. The President is a man of very striking ability. Mercury in Scorpio makes him "just, uncompromising, constant, firm of purpose, prudent, patient, industrious, strict, chaste, mindful of injuries, steady in pursuance of an object and desirous of honor." These characteristics are somewhat diminished by the opposition of Mercury to the moon. Mercury Ptolemy tells us that the intellectual position of Mercury to the moon. Mercury has no aspect with any other body except the sun, and, says Ptolemy: "Mercury alone having dominion of the mind renders it having dominion of the mind renders it elever, sensible, capable of great learning, inventive, expert, logical, studious of na-ture, speculative, of good genius, emulous, benevolent, skillful in argument, accurate benovolent, skillful in argument, accurate in conjecture, adapted to science and tractable." He adds: "The sun likewise cooperates to increase probity, industry, honor and laudable qualities."

The nativity is not fortunate except as regards the President's intellectual gifts. The moon was at the full, and neither sun nor moon had any aspect with Jupiter or Venus. He is likely to have a troubled Administration.

Administration.

The year will be extremely unfortunate for the country at large as well as for its Chief Magistrate. On this account I judge there is not the slightest probability of his election to a second term.

This being a nocturnal birth, and the moon being on the cusp of the ninth house, she was the hyleg, or giver of life. Her position could scarcely have been more unposition could scarcely have been more un-favorable. She was very near the most evil of the fixed stars, Caput Algol, at her full and nearly in parallel to Mars. These things threaten injuries to the face and eyes, and a painful death.

The President did not, like Grant, reach his eminence in life by a fortuitous combi-nation of circumstances, but by his con-spicuous ability, and this we find designated by the fortunate trine from the night house.

spicuous ability, and this we find designated by the fortunate trine from the ninth house of the moon to Saturn. The only other good position in the horoscope is the trine of Venus and Jupiter.

As already remarked, the President's firmness of character is likely to be considerably modified, by the opposition of the moon and Mercury. A writer in the English University Megazine, in an article some time ago on "The Soul and the Stars," took occasion to point out the remarkable recurrence of this aspect in the horoscopes of men of high genius. It is found in those of Shakesbeare, Byron, Wordsworth, Shelley, Keats, Heine, Musset and Ruskin, and appears to bestow a tinge of romance and poetry to the mind. These, in Garfield's case, are tempered by the graver characteristics produced by the beautiful trine of the moon to Saturn.

lish University Magazine, in an article some time ago on "The Soul and the Stars," took occasion to point out the remarkable recurrence of this aspect in the horoscopes of men of high genius. It is found in those of Shakespeare, Byron, Wordsworth, Shelley, Keats, Heine, Musset and Roskin, and appears to bestow a tinge of romance and poetry to the mind. These, in Garfield's case, are tempered by the graver characteristics produced by the beautiful trine of the moon to Saturn.

It is a curious circumstance that at the fime Gen. Garfield was nominated, June 8, 1880, near one o'clock p. m., the last degrees of Virgo were rising, the same into the world. The sun, moon and Mercury were all near the meridian, and the sun was in trine (fortunate) to the places occupied at the nativity by Jupiter and Venus. When the tide first turned in the convention the very degree of the sign of the Virgin under which Mr. Garfield was born was making its appearance on the universe performed its daily course.

Mrs. Garfield Visits the White Hous

The White House looked silent and deserted at 10 o'clock this morning. There were no stragglers about the gates and no sign of life within the mansion or in the grounds. Very few people were passing along the streets. Suddenly a well-known carriag the same and the streets. well-known carriage, the carriage formerly used by the President, drove into the grounds. The curtains were drawn down well-known carried by the President, drove into the grounds. The curtains were drawn down and it was a mystery who was inside until the vehicle stopped at the portico. Then the door was thrown open and

Young Harry Garfield sprang out. As he did so, Sergt. Dinsmore, Private Secretary Brown and Assistant Private Secretary Pruden appeared at the door of the Mansion. The former rushed forward to the carriage just in time

The party stood on the portice for a moment. Mrs. Gar-field, attired in deepest black, stood pale and silent. Suddeuly she turned her eyes toward the door through which her noble husband had been borne, and as she did so Tenra Welled Into Her Eyes and chased each other down her checks. Noticing her emotion, Mrs. Rockwell wound her arm around Mrs. Garfield's waist and assisted the distressed lady into the house. Harry Garfield, with Private Secretary Brown, went on before, and started to reac the private stairway by passing through the dass doors.

Mrs.Garfield, however, shook her head and the party then proceeded to the cloak room and reached the stairway by that means. Upon reaching the upper floor Mrs. Garfield was shown to her own room, where for a few minutes she remained un-disturbed. Presently she came out,

Her Features Were Calm Again. and she at once proceeded to give directions as to the packing and shipping to Ohio of various articles. When this was concluded, various articles. When this was concluded, she requested to be driven back to Attorney-General MacVeagh's. The party descended General MacVeagh's. The party descended the stairs once more, and when they passed across the portice quite a gathering of people were there.

To several whom she knew, Mrs. Garfield bowed sadly, but spoke no word. Her sweet, pale face betokened the most intense anguish, and pity filled the hearts of those who saw her. When the carriage door was closed, the vehicle drove away. Mrs. Garfield had gone from the Mansion never to cross its threshold again.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Sept. 22.—The committee of arrangements is busily pushing forward the work of preparation for the last rites on Sunday and Monday. The floor is six feet above ground, the points of entrance and exit on the Superior street sides being reached by inclined planes. The four corners of the roof are surmounted by large pinnacles of draped flags, and from their bases flow pennants of American colors appropriately draped.

The roof rises to a pointed centre, festoned with white and black drapery. The committee appointed to escort the remains to this city will leave here at 1 o'clock to-morrow afternoon and meet the President's train at Pittsburg, escorting it from that city, and reaching here at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.
